Fox Terrier's Points. The fox terrier is the most intelligent of all the smaller breeds, and there is hardly a trick that he cannot learn in a very few leasons. He is usually healthy, makes the best kind of a watch dog, and his ability to catch and kill rats and other vermin is another story. In symmetry, size and character the dog must present a generally gay lively and active appearance. The ter-rier, like the foxhound, must on no account be "leggy," nor must be be too short in the leg. He should stand like a cleverly made hunter, covering a lot of ground, yet with a short back, as before stated. He will then attain the highest degree of propelling power, to-gether with the greatest length of stride that is compatible with the length of his body. Weight is not a certain criterion of a terrier's fitness for his work—general shape, size and con-tour are the main points, and if a dog can gallop and stay and follow his fox up a drain it matters little what his weight is to a pound or so, though roughly speaking, it may be said that he should not scale over twenty pounds. —Eugene R. Cole in Home Magazine.

One does not often attribute the virtue of patience to a snake. "Letters From a Surgeon," however, contain an anecdote in which its existence is evident. Dr. Perry, surgeon of the Twen-tieth Massachusetts, wakened in camp one morning to find himself tightly held in the clutch of Dr. Hayward, his senior officer.

"Don't move, John, till I say three!" ordered the senior sharply. "Then seize my hands and spring to your feet. One, two, three!"

At the word Dr. Perry jumped, and he never made a cleaner leap. He was just in time to see a moccasin dive un-der the coat which he had been using for a pillow. Armed with sticks, they dragged the coat away, but saw only the hole into which the snake had glided. The surgeon had accidentally blocked the entrance to the reptile's abode, and it had lain all coiled under the back of his neck, watting patiently for him to move so ft could enter.

"Now, my dear sir," said the life as-surance agent peranastvely, "I wonder if I might put before you one or two powerful reasons why you should in-sure your life?"

"Certainly, my dear sir," replied the victim; "fire away. I shall be delighted to listen to you."

Accordingly the life assurance man delivered a lecture of nearly half an hour's duration on the advantages of life assurance, setting forth all the reasons why his listener should insure his life immediately for a large amount. When he was done the other man said: "Well, that's not bad, but nothing

"Nothing new?" asked the life assur-ance man. "What do you mean?" "Oh, well," said the other, "you see I'm a life assurance agent myself, and wanted to see if you had any new deas to give me."

"The Ring of the Niebelungen" was first produced in London under the special patronage of King Edward VII. when he was Prince of Wales. He loyally remained in his box from beginning to end, although he confessed afterward that it was the hardest work he ever did. When Wotan came on the darkened stage to an accompaniment of discords the prince took a doze and an hour later was awakened by a double forte crash of the large orchestra. He fell asleep again, but in fifteen min-utes was startled by another tremendous crash and found Wotan ing against time. After the performance the prince told the manager in great confidence that if there was a Wotan in other Wagner operas he would withdraw his patronage.

On one occasion when the famous Nasr-ed-dia was pressed for money he went to the sultan for permission to levy a tax of a penny on every man in Turkey who was afraid of his wife. The sultan gave him leave, and at the end of a few months Nasr-ed-din re turned with a hundred mules laden with gold. "But what am I to get out of all this?" inquired the sultan. "have brought you a beautiful Georgian slave," replied the sage. "Hush!" said the sultan, glancing over his shoulder. "Don't let my wife hear?" And the wily Nasr-ed-din Hedja added another penny to his store.

EPISCOPAL HIGH SCHOOL,

Nones of Great Men. Prominent noses seem to have been the property of many great men. Ly-curgus and Solon had noses six inches in length, and Ovid was surnamed on account of his large nose. Scipio Nasica derived his name from his prominent olfactory organ, and Alexander the Great and Cardinals Wolsey and Richelieu all had large On the medals of Cyrus and Artaxerxes their noses came clear out to the rim of the coin. Washington's was the true aquiline type, indicative of firmness and patience, as was the nose of Julius Caesar. Mohammed had singular nose. It was so curved that a writer has told us that the point of it seemed continually striving to insert itself between his lips. The closes of Franklin, Shakespeare and Dr. John-son all had wide nostrils, betokening strength and love of thought. The nose

The following story is told of the music of the overture to "A Midsum-mer Night's Dream:" While Mendelssohn was deep in the making of this same fine overture he went riding one awhile, to rest their horses the two boon companions dismounted and stretched themselves out under the shade of a great tree. Suddenly there came an excited "Hush!" from the great composer, who half arose very cautiously. A large fly was buzzing over them, and Mendelssohn was anxlous to catch the true sound of the insect's hum as it gradually drifted farther away. Many days later when the overture had been completed the artist seventh of the descending scale from B minor to F sharp minor. "There, that's the fly that buzzed past us at Schonhausen," said Mendelssohn.
